Perfect, thanks very much. Yes, JRR grants that permission.

Best,

cheryl

Dear Dr. Morken,

Yes, we encourage authors to republish/post their articles published in The Journal of Raptor Research, provided the following specifications are met.

- (1) The article must be published/posted in the final format, i.e., a pdf of the JRR article, with the JRR headers visible
- (2) You must clearly acknowledge that it has been published in JRR
- (3) The author himself/herself must ask permission from JRR and authorize the republication.

This last requirement allows the authors to retain control of where their work is posted. Nothing formal is required, but one of the authors must indicate that they would like you to post their article. I've copied this to the corresponding author, but you may ask Ingar Jostein Øien to authorize it instead. An email message from one of the authors to JRR is sufficient.

Kind regards,

cheryl

Hi

I am an administrator of the institutional archive AURA of the University of Agder, (Norway).

The attached article was published in Journal of Raptor Research, 55(4), 2021, 619-626, and I am writing to check that we are authorized to publish said article in our Institutional archive, in the published version? Also, please advise what License applies, and if there are any restrictions/requirements for publishing in our open archive.

The author Ingar Jostein Øien is affiliated with the University of Agder, Kristiansand Norway.

Thank you!
